PLANS FOR FLIGHT TO CIRCLE GLOBE

Director Kruckman, in Washington, to Enlist Aid of U. S. in Patrolling Course.

NO LONGER AN IDLE DREAM

Aviators Who Formerly Scoffed Now Growing Interested in Great 1915 Event.

Washington, April 1,—Arnold Kruck-man projector and director of the world's circuit acroplane race that is to be a feature of the Panama-Pa-cific Exposition in 1915, has come to Washington to enlist the co-operation of this government in looking after the section of the race route that will pass through the United States. In speaking of the race prospect, Mr. Krickman sald:

"It is almost too early to say anything definite about the arrangements for the race, except that it will be held, and will do a great deal toward developing interest in aeronautics in this country and bringing together the na-tions taking part in the event. "Two years ago such a race as thin would have been unthinkable. To-day it is a fair possibility, and by 1915 it will be a resomable certainty. Such unfavorable comments as have been made by noted long-distance filers has Garros, Andre Beaumont and La Blanc have been based upon conditions as they were a year or two ago.

Even the most prejudiced when they are brought face to face with the con-ditions are willing to agree with me that already the world's circuit is a light.

like hard problems have worked out. Japan, Russia, France, Germany and England have all cheerfully volunteered to look after the route wherever it touches their territory.

Going Over the Route.

"We have had two men going overathe Alaskan coast from Seattle to Vernice and the southern ke hard problems have worked out some, and thence around the southern and chain of islands to its near est approach to Asia. Their report has been wholly favorable, because the various islands all offer good alighting ground, and all of them have boats can easily be sheltered. I am going shortly on a trip across European Russia and Siberia to determine just what arrangements must be made for stocking gasolene, oil and spare parts at the control stations over this part of the route. Of course, all of the acropianes entered in the race will have a chance to carry wireless, and all of the control stations will be equipped with wireless instruments, so that they can both receive and send mespages. An aviator will not have to be an expert wireless operator to be able to send and receive enough to communicate with the nearest control station outside of which he may light.

ditions are willing to agree with me that already the world's circuit is a fair possibility.

"I had a sample of this in Dayton, Ohio, not many days ago. Orville Wright, you know, is about as conservative and unenthusiastic as any one you can find, but after talking over the matter with me for an hour he suggested himself extending the conference, and talked with me the greater part of the day, winding up with the admission that the race was a much more practicable thing than he had been at first willing to admit.

"We will, of course, have to take the Wrights into consideration from a legal standpoint, in arranging for the section of the race to be flown in this country. We are not hunting trouble, nor seeking to involve the forceign aviators in any. Therefore, we will arrange for a license from the Wrights for any foreign machine that is entered in the competition, so that the foreigners need have no fear of legal complications when they fly to this country.

"Already we have gone over a large."

"In all probability the control stations and the racing machines will have a sending radius of 100 miles. The section of the race through Europe will be very easily managed, and there is nothing at all difficult about the Atlantic crossing if one takes the northern route by way of Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland.

"It is hardy fair to say that we have either made or changed any of the conditions governing the world's race. What we are doing so far is to lay the subject before the aviators in all the countries interested, and after getting the best opinion of everybody concerned. At first it was suggested to condition from a literature that is about as far as definite arrangements have been made. It looks far as bout as far as definite arrangements have been made. It looks far as bout as far as definite arrangements have been made. It looks far as the foreigners need have no fear of the care.

New York, April 1.-The resignation of Douglas I. McKay as police commissioner has been in Mayor John Purroy Mitchel's hands since last Friday. This fact became known to-day.
